He says, "There are fish in the freezer and furniture in the house as well as relaxation and satisfaction from these hobbies."

Mrs. Fox (Rebecca) interrupted her college career to become a homemaker when attending West Virginia Wesleyan college. After making a home for her husband and two daughters for 18 years she decided to take up her college studies again and is presently enrolled in Illinois State university at Normal as a full time student majoring in elementary education.

Mary is the youngest at age 15 and a sophomore. Her main interest is her horse, Darjon's Destiny. She wants to be a veterinarian and has spent the past year working for Dr. D. P. Lott in his Tremont office and surgery on a part time basis. She has been an MYF officer, member of the Latin club, GAA, chorus 4H and YWCA. Corn borer damage feared high this year.

You can't ignore corn borers. Not this year, because all signs point toward serious yield losses from a build-up of borer populations from last fall.

You can get the most effective corn borer control by applying Diazinon 14G while borers are in the whorls of the plants, before they bore into the stalks. Use 7-14 lbs. of Diazinon per acre by ground rig or airplane, and get Diazinon into the plant whorls.

Contact your local supplier, or aerial applicator for Diazinon 14G and ward off this serious borer attack. Do it now.

John Rose drives one of the few remaining dray teams of horses in Chatsworth. Rose is a lover of horses and believes in feeding and giving them proper care. As a result, his team still has enough life to "run away" when an opportunity presents itself.

One morning last week he started to turn his team around on the paved street east of the A. F. Walter building where he had loaded his wagon with ashes and other refuse from the basement. As the team turned, the neckyoke dropped loose from the wagon tongue and that was a signal for the team to start on a wild run north. Rose hung onto the lines and kept the team in the road with the wagon tongue dragging.

When near the William Kueffner residence, Rose steered the team into the ditch and was jerked out of the wagon when the tongue stuck into the ground. Although bruised from the fall, Rose was not badly hurt. Several automobiles parked in the path of the runaway had narrow escapes from being damaged.

NOTICE

When a school board is concerned about school building an advisory committee is chosen to help steer the school board on conditions and give advice.

In reading the Pantagraph June 8 staff writer Bob Pollitt states that the chairman of the steering committee gave instructions, this chairman on the steering committee is also president of the school board.

According to our way of thinking this kind of steering from the same chairman looks like there is a very strong effort to gain an idea somewhere. There must be plenty of good school advise without using the same person as leader on both boards.

Just casually reading in last weeks Chatsworth Plaindealer this same situation shows as Mr. Pollitt wrote of. It really means nothing when reading the article but after all you have to get people thinking in certain lines before an election

Let You Forget

Dear Mrs. Haskins:

The "Dads" of Chatsworth protest being called "Dead" in Pat's Patter, and question your motives in referring to us in this manner. In the last week we've been called "tired" and now "dead," when will all this criticism end? We as a group have never openly criticized "mothers" or "motherhood," we've always looked upon this with pleasure, so why pick on us in print?

I would assure you too that many Chatsworth wives do not agree with your description, and I would imagine that women's groups are already planning letters and demonstrations protesting your description of their "tigers."

Since Webster describes "dead" as no longer in use, I call upon the wives of Chatsworth not to take this lying down, but to defend their husbands - or Mothers' Day 1970, will be a sad occasion.

Speaking then in behalf of all Chatsworth "Dads," don't send flowers on Father's Day, we haven't expired, we're just sleeping in front of the TV set.
